

Book Notes

Sunday: A History of the First Day from Babylonia to the Super Bowl by Craig Harline

Sunday. Just the word brings forth a rich mix of memories, associations, and ideas for most anyone of any age. But how did we come to have a day with such a singular set of traditions? Historian Craig Harline looks at Sunday from its ancient beginnings all the way to recent America.

263.3 HARLINE

Note to Self by Connor Franta

Youtube sensation Connor Franta shares a side of himself he's rarely shown on or off camera. Note to Self digs into Franta's battles with clinical depression, social anxiety, self-love, and his desire to maintain an authentic self in a world that values shares and likes over true connections.

792.028 FRANTA

Killers of the Flower Moon by David Grann

In the 1920s, the richest people per capita in the world were the members of the Osage Indian Nation in Oklahoma. Profiting from the discovery of oil beneath their lands, the Osage rode in chauffeured limousines and sent their children to private schools in Europe. Then, one by one, they began to die under mysterious circumstances. David Grann revisits the bungled investigation and the exposure of one of the most sinister conspiracies in American history.

976.6004 GRANN

Love Warrior by Glennon Doyle Melton

Just when Glennon Doyle Melton was beginning to feel she had it all figured out, her marriage imploded. A recovering alcoholic and bulimic, Glennon found that rock bottom was a familiar place. On the road to healing and self-discovery, Glennon finds the beauty that unfolds when one couple commits to unlearning everything they've been taught so that they can finally, after thirteen years of marriage, fall in love.

306.89 MELTON